

Operations & Logistics Coordinator

The International Space Federation is looking for a dedicated Operations & Logistics Coordinator to work the full scope of the business' operations, ranging from production and logistics to internal processes, and development projects. You will report to and support our Operations Manager.

About us

The International Space Federation (ISF) is a research and development organization dedicated to scientific discovery, technological advancement, and education. Its foundation is built upon the development of gravity control as a novel form of propulsion and harnessing quantum vacuum energy as a sustainable power source. Our R&D headquarters are located in Haute-Savoie.

The team's research and publications are driven by the unification of scientific disciplines and promote collaboration with the global academic community. ISF's innovative approach is positioned to catalyze advancements in energy production and transportation, addressing the ecological challenges of our time with sustainable solutions.

Join our mission to make the World a better place!
